

IN THE
SUPREME COURT OF FANTASY FOOTBALL
October Term, 2026 (Expedited to September)

MARC GOLDICH,
Appellant,

v.

GOD EMPEROR COMMISSIONER DYLUSS,
Appellee.

No. 26-1

APPELLANT'S RESPONSE TO BRIEF OF AMICUS CURIAE

Appellant thanks Amicus for his thoughtful, meticulously researched, seven-page defense of a dispute that had already been resolved by the time his brief was filed.

Amicus devotes considerable attention to admin keys, oracle outputs, hard forks, canonical chains, Rule 23, the Phantom Clerk Doctrine, and whether two people constitute a class or merely a group chat. These are important questions. They are also questions this Court need not reach.

Appellant requested that the Draft be moved from 8:00 p.m. to 10:00 p.m. The Commissioner opposed that relief. The Commissioner subsequently moved the Draft to 10:00 p.m. Appellant thus obtained the complete relief he sought and voluntarily dismissed his remaining claims.

Amicus nevertheless asks this Court to "affirm" the judgment below and permit the Draft to "proceed as scheduled."

The Draft is presently scheduled for 10:00 p.m., the precise relief Appellant sought.

On that point, the parties finally agree.

Having obtained complete relief, Appellant voluntarily dismissed his remaining claims. Amicus's extensive discussion of the merits therefore arrives after the controversy between Appellant and Appellee has been resolved and, more importantly, advocates an ultimate disposition indistinguishable from Appellant's own: the Draft should proceed at 10:00 p.m.

The Court is therefore respectfully invited to treat the remaining discussion as an unusually sophisticated law review article concerning a fantasy football dispute whose requested relief has already been granted.

See Goldich v. Dylus, 2 F.F. 10 (2026) ("Come on, man.").

Appellant does, however, appreciate Amicus's concession that Appellant's brief is "very good."

Respectfully submitted,

/s/ Marc Goldich
